(Vision:) After the words came to me in the night, “You’ve been pitted with your worst fears” the thoughts and vision came. It’s like these beast fears were set on the path that someone was trying to walk down, but they were more spirit than real. Somewhat like a hologram, or virtual reality. More like lying vanities, but set there with the image to have the person face their worst fears, fight them, call their bluff and get past them, making them vanish and not hinder the person. It would be the hardest thing to fight. But it was all planned; it was an opponent perfectly tailored to match the person, to make it really be the hardest fear they ever had to fight, so that they could do just that: fight and get past it. It was not accidental, but all planned to the detail by the Lord to create a challenge of the highest sort, to strengthen the person as they fought to be victorious over these fear enemies on the pathway.

(Jesus speaking:) I have pitted you with your worst fears. I have matched you to face your worst fears. Like it says, “The thing you fear, comes upon you.” Not that the situation you fear materializes, but the fear itself comes and meets you at the path, a resemblance of something that brings fear to you, so that with strength you must push the actual fear aside and carry on your pathway, with nothing scaring you from reaching your goal.

As you near the ending of the pathway, on your long and difficult journey for Me, your opponents are more fierce-looking, aggressive, and seem less fightable. These fears that have set on you, like two fighting beastly men, have come to block your way.

Call their bluff, for indeed it is so. I have let the imagery be so, to the T, perfectly matching to your deepest fears due to your life’s situation. But you have just got to get past it. They aren’t really there, that is they are not really stronger than you and able to stop you. They are not flesh but of a spiritual substance and can be pushed aside like a mental picture can change and be cast out of your mind.

Why would I let things be so perfectly matching to what you have been so hurt by and it cause you the deepest anguish? To teach you faith. To believe that no matter what besets you--like Job if yet the next messenger comes to you telling you of another good that is spoiled and lays in ashes--that you still trust that I am the one planning and directing your life, and that I am going to bring all, and I mean everything, for good in the end. It’s just something you have to go through, to endure, and then when the rewards are passed out, and each one’s heartaches are paid back with glory, it will be worth it, and you will fully understand there.

No, you can’t have a perfectly peaceful and lovely life. That is not what Earth life is for. It’s to learn. It’s to feel intense pain. It’s to find true peace, even in the midst of a storm. It’s to learn to love again and again, no matter what satan does to stop the gift of love from God being passed on from person to person. The wicked one has been at it from the beginning, stopping love in this way and that way.

You are here to learn that no matter what things look like, as messy as they seem, as hard and challenging as they are, and as basically impossible most things appear, most of the time, yet I do have a plan, a reason, and a solution for each thing you will ever encounter in life; and if not seen here and today, I will give you a very good explanation in the world to come.

I love you too much to let you just go on your merry little way that will lead to the sloping edge of the cliff most of the time. I say, "most of the time" because people are like balls on a mountain, they tend to roll down, and fall off the nearest edge. Why? Because that is what is the easiest thing to do. But to climb up and to fight with all your might against the downward pull, that is what you certainly need My supernatural strength to do.

So what do you need My supernatural help to do today? What part of the mountain do you need to climb up? –That is to say what is facing you that seems really hard, yet you know it is leading to a goal I did tell you to reach for.

You are never, alone, you know? We always walk together. Whether you get My help a lot or only a little is up to you much of the time.

So what is looming over you, what is blocking your way? What obstacles are making it seem totally impossible to make progress without veering off to the side to try to get around it, but might cost you a slip and fall because you didn't stay on the path? Let Me deal with it and help you keep your eyes on the goal as you push on forward and let the obstacles be ones that roll on down and off the mountain.

And you'll be stronger then for it. And you'll breathe fresh air more deeply after your struggle. The way up will even seem easier, because though it's still going up and still a steep path way, and you still are sweating and your heart is beating hard, at least the road blocks aren't there anymore hindering you.

And so on we go, strong and more full of faith then when you and I started out the climb on this particular mountain.
