

12-Sept-2021_faith is anticipation

(Jesus speaking:) There is a nook in Heaven where those who have sustained particular battles along the lines of jealousy get to rest and be refreshed.

Everyone is matched with different foes that they have to face down and fight through, often repeatedly in their lifetime. But all who are fighting for the right side, for the winning side, will get renewal and refreshment in all the best ways.

Here there are attending angelic beings who know just how to bring the best healing fluids to a person's soul. Yes, even in Heaven healing is needed—at least for awhile, for the scars of Earth's existence run deep, and wounds need to be tended to.

Questions, so many questions, so much to be answered. Yet not all can be answered right away, for the story of life goes on yet. But faith, much much faith is given as the main staple element fed to those needing to gain healing from their battles on earth. With faith, you don't have to know just how the story is going to turn out, but you want to keep going.

That is what faith is—not knowing all things; not being as God who knows more than is right and best for you to know, yet trusting that all is going to be good and you want to keep obeying until you get to see the good ending, the really good way it all will turn out. You want to see the great finale that you know will occur. So it's more like anticipation, this thing you call "faith". You know a surprise, a good one, is coming around the corner, and you want to hold on until you get to see it. You may not know just what it is, but you have this determination to get through anything, any hardship, if that's what it takes to get to the prize that the path of faith leads to.

Don't quit before the victory comes. That is faith in action: fighting on through thick and thin until you get to see and hold and touch and fully experience whatever is on the other side of the fog that you are fighting your way through.
