

13-Jan-2021_let them snicker

(Spirit helper speaking:) Some say it's folly to meet with your mates in a realm that can't be seen.

So let them stare.

Let them gawk.

Let them snicker.

Let them talk.

It's not their future that is at stake but yours, if you do not heed the calls of your invisible Lord and commander. And so in this invisible warfare, with the strongest warriors of all times that you have yet to be properly introduced to, fight on the fight of faith. For it is only, or rather primarily in the spirit that victories are won and lost.

Praise the Name of our Commander, who trains us hard, and directs us in the winning manoeuvres. Let the laughing, the mocking, the voices that say you are foolish to pursue us and join in fighting with us, only spur you on, not cause your fire to be quenched or dimmed.

Why and how can these spur you on? For you can know that with every bit of opposition, there is a reason for it. It must mean you are striking gold and finding the true hidden treasure, if there are voices trying to scare you off. They are not trying to help you find it; that is not why they say there is no gold, or that you are looking in all the wrong places. Rather its to keep you poor and defeated.

Pursue your teammates and spiritual warfare yet harder when annoying sounds are trying to distract and dissuade you. It simply means you are very near the prize, and the opposition is doing all they can to stop you from finishing with honours and receiving the "Well done" from the Master's lips that you have fought so long to hear on that final day.