More from the "Seeds of David": Grace and Love

When you aren't so hung up on being oh so right--that is right according to some book or standards of this world-- then you are finally free to love, really love at last. And you discover that God gives the grace, the mercy, the allowance for new ways to show His love. He loves all men and wants to reach out to them in all the ways He can. God is the only right one, who is truly right on, on the button, correct every time. And you need to move with Him if you want to be truly correct.

Look at the example that the Bible, as a whole, shows. Rules changed, but God's plan was always to bring all into a close relationship with Him. Ways and means changed. What was right for one was a no-no for someone else. Why? Because it would turn them away from knowing the God of love.

Swift and firm judgement was given to some, while mercy and forgiveness and a new chance to right things was given to others. God knew what would be right in the situation, and set the right example for those around. Again, it was all for being allowed the freedom to show people His love, ultimately. Sometimes it took a round-about way to get there, but eventually those got the point, or are still, to this day, trying to see the picture in the tapestry of Bible stories, of a God who is showing His love.

So, can you in all you do remember that it's love and not the laws of man--or rehashed old laws of God for some other situation--that will truly "bring all men" to Jesus? And this doesn't just mean the lost somewhere out there, but your very own family members also.
