

22-02-2022_world says the opposite

(Jesus speaking: ) The enemy wants you to feel guilty that you are doing something wrong. But is it wrong to comfort the broken in heart and to bind up their wounds? Or to visit the sick and forsaken? No, no, and again I say no. Those who leave this crown, because of the cross, won't get the "well done".

Do you think I'd need to say well done if all the world and your own mates and companions were declaring it all your life in all that you did? No. I say it because it's basically the opposite of what all the world is telling you. I am, in many cases the first person to tell you it was good and right what you did. I say it loud and long so all know that you were right in My eyes and you were doing it for Me.

I say it and I am in many cases the only voice declaring it; when? At the end. First finish, and do so by faith, only waiting for My "well done", because if you are hearing it from others, you can almost be sure that it's not what I want you to be doing. The opposite will happen when you are truly doing Your Lord's will and work. You get blame and shame here and now, but acclaim and accolade later, by the voice and person that actually and only matters in the end. Okay?
