More from the “Seeds of David”: Abolish the old, make way for the new

I go around loosing people from their ties to this physical and carnal existence. They have to be free in order to enjoy the new and glorious days of the future. Too many ties to the past keep them from embracing the future. Sometimes I’m a painful tool to be used, as the sentimental things perish and must be forsaken altogether. The “victim” of such difficult forsakings is left in a twirl and swirling and wondering where to place their bearings and anchor on to next.

I keep moving people’s hearts to look to the eternal and get their stability from the things that will not perish, rot, or be consumed. Because time passes, and because there are physical needs as well, this keeps people holding on, rather frantically, to whatever they can, to give them the impression of stability; something that won’t change. But they keep looking to things that they can see and touch and hold. If they looked beyond, to what can’t be seen, then they’d find what really will last forever—for no human hands can mar that which is eternal.

And so I take you, from this and that dwelling place. Why? To loose your ties, to keep you forsaking all that must go; to set you free time and again. First you move here, then you live there, and on you go, dropping things as you move with the wind of God’s Spirit.

Cut down all that you must, for there will be yet more manoeuvres in your life, to shake you loose and to keep you pressing onward into the realm of the Eternal.
