More from the "Seeds of David": Carlos

Has your strength increased with all that you have had to now do? It has. Why? Because I have been called on to meet the needs. How often has "Keys of strength" been on your lips or in your heart's prayer? That's as often as I have come.

I come and lift. I come and hold. You really do depend on us from this unseen realm to uphold you and the little one. Sometimes it's the best thing that can be done, is for a little one to come into a woman's life. For it is then that they make the fastest progress. They mature in new ways, and grow in other ways that wouldn't have even been touched on if they only had their other work and 'to do's' in their arms.

Giving unselfishly to another is a great way to grow.

You've become stronger in so many ways, and you are going to need it to meet yet the next challenges. Each experience helps provide what is needed in the next challenge. You build on what you've learned from the Lord. And if what you learned was not from the Lord, then when the next burden and block is added on top of it, whatever wasn't firm and right, crumbles and collapses. Either way it helps your life tower to get strong, as the weight of new challenges puts the last foundation to the test. Either it holds, or it has a way of condensing and consolidating what really is good and true by collapsing the fluffed up pockets of air and weak building material.
