

26-JUL-2020_God's eager students

(Jesus speaking: ) I don't wish to hurt you. I do wish to train you and change you into the being that is needed—both for you and more importantly for My high calling.

You think yourself small, lowly, and of not much worth. And that is good. For indeed without Me you can do nothing. But I wish to enshapen you, to mould you, to structure you. It's all for a mighty good purpose.

These courts of the Lord that you are visiting now, with marble tables and water rivulets that run through it here and there, plants that adorn it, and most of all the throne of God, where He comes to talk with His Saints, is one of the many rooms of learning. You sit here to learn the ways of the Lord, and to study in the Spirit.

Learning doesn't come easy for those who wish to leave and go out and play in the far reaching fields. But learn they must if they wish to do their Master's will.

Sit and learn, and make My Word your passion. For as long as that is truly your highest pleasure, then the rest will be all that much more joyous.

Sit and learn. Listen and absorb. The Mind of the Lord at the Table of your God. His ways are not past finding out and He wishes to have eager students at His table daily.

Classes include correcting of wrong modes of doing things, and learning new ways of being. And there are all sorts of methods of instruction employed in the classroom of God. Sit up and learn, and make that be your main focus. Then you can have the wherewith to teach others to yet teach others.

But you have to listen, really listen, not just selective listening for fragments that you are hoping to hear. Stay after class to get the "foot notes" the after hours learning comments. These will teach you new things that put meat on the bones of the basics taught in the class.

But you have to listen, really listen, to take in the Words of the Lord.

And I'll sit with you and go over the lessons. Point out things you didn't catch right the first time, and help you do some practice runs so you get it down right.

Listen and learn, that is to say draw knowledge from Your Lord, more than you let your mind think. Don't direct the conversation, and lead it here and there with your own train of thought. Come to class with an open heart and mind to learn whatever is on His mind.

I love you and wish to be ever near you.

Your loving King, Lord, and Saviour, Jesus Christ
