(Comment: It's been two weeks now since that very unusual storm. I haven't stopped thinking about it either. I can't help but think it was the start of the next earnest part of the war. Something significant was happening. I wanted to know more; if the Lord wants to reveal anything more. Or what we are to be doing or changing in; or being prepared for.)

(Jesus speaking:) I want to peel back the curtain on the world stage a bit more, for not all is as it does appear. New pots are stirring and yes, much more death is happening—far more than you are permitted to hear about. (Just as it was in that one country when many were being slaughtered and all phones and photos were forbidden from documenting it.) So much is being hidden from the main public's knowledge; as if they knew what was actually occurring, there would be a revolt, the like this world has not seen. So to keep the peace and yet conquer new territory, things of the oppressive sort need to be silenced. How do they do it? Having no survivors is one way, no one to tell the tale. Or making things seem natural is another, like it's nothing with the fingerprints of humans or part-humans, I say. But the lies will all be exposed one day.

While you are living in a peaceful little zone, there are evils befalling people groups you may have never or seldom heard exist. It's all hush hush. You know less than you realise. But that does help you focus on the real foe and the real matter at hand—learning of the weapons of the war that you are to be fighting; not flesh and blood tactics and getting involved in this or that skirmish, or defending this or that underdog. No, it's the spirit that counts and matters, and great will be the reward for those who enter the arena of the battles for the souls of men and fight the semi invisible foe.

You can almost see the face of your evil opponent, just like you can almost see My face in the good and Godly ones who also fight alongside you, each doing their part in the war efforts.

These kinds of storms are happening all the time, it's just that you aren't privy to them, as they are out of your sight and hearing realm. But the fact that it was brought into the realm where you live and you could see it, hear it, and feel its effects shows that the fighting is now getting closer. Closer to you; and closer to the world; more in the realm that humans are aware of. Which means, either you pick up your weapons and gird on your armor and get fighting, or you become a casualty. I've given you the call, shouted out that the battle is on in fierce array. So what are you going to do about it?

Pray, earnestly for the fighters of faith, for their faith is being tested in tremendous ways. And keep your sword sharp, by living by the Word of God. Next, see what other war efforts you personally are to join, and do it with a passion, forsaking all other interests that would slow you down.

Finally, realise that though the war is on, you might not see or hear much of what is going on, but don't let that trick you into lethargy, for that is when something fierce might come suddenly on you and knock you down. Be alert and ready always for an attack—in body, mind or spirit. Hold your part of the battle field, whether it be quiet or intense, and guard it well for the Kingdom of God.
