[Note: The day after the storm I got this urge and thought to put a mark of ashes on my forehead. I felt it was a significant day or signal from the Lord, that something was happening. For many reasons I wanted to make this mark on my head, for the Lord to see. I wore it for a day or so, partly on Saturday and then on some of Sunday. Here is what the Lord said this mark of ashes was to mean for me. Photo at end of file.]

(Jesus speaking: ) The line has been drawn, you must not cross it. The line of truth versus error. Stay on the side of right, true right, and I will honour you.

The ashes declare death, the year of death. So many die for lack of nourishment. Their hearts held not the light of truth and they plunged into the depths of despair and there they languished and there they will perish. –Just as Jeremiah would have died in the pit for lack of food, so will these who have fallen into the pits of dark despair.

Death will come to so many, and because of death will more die. Death begets death. The horsemen are riding.

You sigh and want nothing of this world to cling unto you.

You declare that it will all burn in the end of days; that fire is coming to so many, if they turn not to the ways of light.

You personally are grieved at the lack of hunger and desire for My Words of life, for Me, for My companionship, for there to be an awakening of heart.

You are declaring your solidarity to the Words of life, the living Words. You choose to believe, seek more, and follow, albeit alone you must go.

You declare your right to proclaim the words of life ... [and] heed not to the lukewarm ways of this word's system. You are called out and all out for Me.

You declare My right to speak, as well, and are as a vessel for Me to use.

You are called out and surrendered to Me alone.

I want the angels to know that you are waiting for Me.

The year of great death is upon the world, and you declare it will be a year like unto no other. Rather than man dying outright at the hand of another, they are compelled to do so unto themselves, by the forces of the world.

Your life is hid in Christ, you are dead to the law, the old law, and are to be resurrected in glory.

Ashes represent a repentant heart; it goes back to the altars of worship and asking for forgiveness of sin. It shows that you are a sinner who needs the blood of the lamb to cleanse you.

The one line shows one God, one heart and mind of all who believe on Him. That we all will be one in truth and light.

It is a sign of repentance and a penitent heart; your desire to always return and pant after the heart of the King and be near unto Him.

It's a sign of refusal to surrender to anything that God doesn't approve of. If it's right you can do it, but if not, you won't let something else turn you away and control your life. Christ alone controls; or what He approves of [controlling you].

It's a minus sign showing the death that is occurring; the souls that are being lost on this world, or being taken to somewhere higher. The loss of life it shows.

Your heart is saddened by the loss of truth, and now you must do your best to declare the good and the true and the Godly.

It is as a slit in the veil, indicating your mind is opened to Heaven, and sealed to the world; closed to the viper. Open to Jesus; He has full entrance.

If others wear tattoos and jewelry and clothes with the most grotesque things pictured, and make-up is smeared all over, why cannot you wear a sign or symbol showing the world that I am on My way, and I deplore the death that is devouring the world.

It can be a sign of mourning for the loved ones of those you know or hear of.

“I am mourning, continually for the loss of life; but I declare the resurrection and new life will come to all who believe in Him who has the power to save and to restore all things and people to their former glory. Jesus has the power to save, both in this life and in the realms beyond.”
