

8-8-2020_Lebanon in Crisis

(Prayer:) Lord, You are able to keep tabs on each and every one of the people there in Lebanon. You know what is really and actually going on. Feed the hungry, and let them come in crowds unto You. Let them kneel before their Maker, rather than turn to violence and gangs and unrest. Let their hearts turn from mammon and see that they need You. Allow the children to not suffer hunger and thirst, but to learn to pray and see miracles occur. Release those in the spirit who have been unjustly harmed, but that love You now and can go there, in flesh some how or in spirit, to aid all the troubled people, to bring their hearts to You and to bring aid and vital needs. Stop the evil ideas in people's hearts to use this to their advantage—as in causing more and more explosions, or removing farms from farmers who have this chemical on their property, etc.

(Note: In the message below, the words in quotations, “ ” are trying to show that this is the mind and thoughts of the evil forces, their view of things, being exposed, etc. I tried to find all of them. But if I missed some, be aware that this isn't a message of Jesus telling all His thoughts, but expressing what the world and rulers might be thinking and saying and reacting like. —A what if... Not a “thus shall it be done.”)

(Jesus Speaking:) Every little detail of this event is important, for each thing can be used in My favour, or by the enemies of nations, who only want to ruin and cause collapse.

Take for example the testimony of the people asking for revolution. This inspires all different types of “aid” workers. For whatever the need is, there will the type of help be given. When a calamity of one type is made, that brings a certain type of assistance. Who do you want running in your back yard? New leadership? Then say it was the government's fault and rebel.

What is the next “bad guy” in the scene?

“Corrupt use of management; corporation that didn't work well, the practical running of things.”

So a new way of doing things is “needed”, not just a new leader of sorts. That sets things up for new management, not just there, but new ways in other countries that are labelled “corrupt”.

Who else is labelled to have caused it? The material itself that burned.

So, “shouldn't countries be checked, by outside sources, as governments themselves are unable to properly manage everything. A worldwide protection body should police these matters of national security.”

And just like the twin towers brought more control in so many areas, and all countries started unitedly having rules for travel, what you could and couldn't bring on a trip, so will this have worldwide percussions of what a country should and shouldn't have as far as dangerous materials go. And along with it a disarming of certain troublesome places—as it's “not safe for the nation or the world”. All the while those who take them away are going to simply repurpose them.

Who else is the culprit? The people themselves, “for having such a pitiful state of things, failures, weak, crumbling, and just being who they are.” They are not portrayed as the clever souls they really are. But broken down and weakly. So “more authority and management is needed to train them, and make them be corralled.”

Their breaking out in agitation is played on to depict “how volatile they are, unstable, and such.” When in actuality they've been some of the most resilient and bearing with troubles patiently countries of many nations. And their intellect is very high. Some of the best educated. But highly educated isn't a plus in the new regime that wants to take over. So people need to be shown as "weakly, unable to manage their own country, and who need serious retraining in the new way of doing things."

Then you've got the so called "corrupt" people handlers, those who pass laws, or who hinder others with long legal obligations, and who confiscate items, and who "stock up the food unsafely rather than dispersing it around in smaller holding stores". So, since food and rules and allowances "was mismanaged, it would be better for others, or a committee of others to check on worldwide food stores to ensure they are properly stored. No longer can a small country manage this right. A world food committee for the good of the people is the solution."

These will ensure that "food is rightly transported around, that there are no nations that have too much while others have too little, and certainly no stockpiling of food for a nation or city, but that is controlled by those managing it. Nothing can be brought in or brought out (export and import) without the watchful eye of those who must manage the food crises of the world. Prices will be stable and ruled by the governing committee."

But how can prices be stable? How can poor and rich alike have access to food and needs? Well, since money is an issue, that must be worked with right from the start. If those who choose not to get with the program, or are, "shame on them", just "too ignorant of the use of technology, that's their loss. But for the clever ones that still want in the game, they can play the new money game, and all will have their basic needs covered."

Each are "given a certain amount, everyone gets the same digital funds to work with, and to add to. But they have to be careful not to waste it. Like a game, there are limits. And if you get into money trouble, and you've gotten 'poor' then you are 'a criminal or very uneducated, and you owe the government some work, so you can get back your debt.'"

They gave you what you needed (barely, rigged of course) and you "spent it foolishly, by buying too much this or that"

("I was getting what I needed for my family" "No you were stockpiling food stuff and seeds to grow foods that were not approved for your district, that cost you not only the quick use-up of your digital funds, but a fee also subtracted. Wonderfully, thanks to new management, there is an opening at the work station where you'll have a chance to earn some of that back, if you work hard.")

And one by one each person is brought into work in the way the great leader wants them to, trying to pay back their debts and keep up with the money way of the "all have what they need" system.

Now, who else plays a role in this scene? The country itself. For "if they can do that blunder, they truly are incompetent to manage things, and just as easily might be a threat to the surrounding areas and the world."

"Things are getting out of hand!" "Look! People are making a small disruption over there. Bring in the troupes. This nation is now to be under constant guard."

And so they move in to "help" and to be "peace keepers".

Their right to govern and be a nation on their own is taken away. In move the eager controllers. Soon everyone, at least for a while, becomes a suspect for being a revoluter, and curfew and ID checks are used, and on goes the list.

"Everyone must of course have proper IDs and be registered." Oh, how easy to take a nation such as this down trodden one. When a nation is in great need, then the solutions can be forced, and those who don't comply become "enemies of the state" and are associated with the old government "that is just trying to yet still corrupt things."

There comes a divide—one side going with the new enforced regime to "save" things (a disguised old regime in new clothes, appearing to be in opposition to the old, so it can get a seat in leadership); and then those that don't want either and wish for true democracy and freedom. And these are labelled as "loyalists of the old, to be done away with."

You see, it always was one and the same in power every single time. But that will all change when "The Kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of the Lord and of His Christ." Until then, it's just one ruler after the next, all puppets of this world's system, for the most part, unless truly yielding to My spirit. But these are few and far between. And even those so called "good" ones, are pestered by the evil, until they too fall or make serious errors. It's all a corrupt system, and it's all going to fall.

You think you are in a nice place, and nothing will befall you? Just watch and see. The only ones that will seem to escape the troubles are those who are right in with the world's ruling class. But that's a pain for them, though they must bear it in secret. Those who seem to actually be okay, but if they are not being controlled yet by the worldwide leadership, they will fall, in some way or another.

These leaders will look for any cracks to move in and take control, or use things to their advantage.

Let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he fall.

Beware, for they that say peace and safety—peace without the controlling powers allowing it—will bring sudden destruction on them. Peace is only allowed by them if they are the ones supposedly bringing it. "How dare anyone get peace from God, from the true Prince of Peace!"

If God says, "blessed are the peacemakers" then woe to them, by the serpent, and he does his best to disrupt them.

If God says, "visit the fatherless" then rules are made against that.

If God says, "comfort" then people are all made so involved with their own set of troubles, they can't think of helping others.

You can be sure that each thing, each command, every ordinance put forth by the Holy Spirit in the scriptures is going to be banned or hindered or stopped. It's a win for Satan in so many ways. For those who disobey God get punished. So if [the Satan] makes it really hard and even seem impossible to do what God says to do, then [people] are punished for it, and he gets to lash out now on the disobedient. Such a creep. Then the work of God is not done either. And those who are not helped because people don't or can't do what God said to do, wonder where God is in all this, and turn away from Him, not seeing His love in action.

People have to do what I did, looking into the face of My enemies who hard-heartedly stood there watching if I would heal on the Sabbath, and if I did, they would take My life for it. Was a man's hand worth the life of the Son of God? It didn't seem fair, but I wouldn't be bullied. I was no coward. It was a sample of what Satan was doing to the true believers, stopping and withering their hands of service. So I just stood up to their face and healed the man. I defied their rules, their authority, their threats. If I was doing it for the cozy praise of man, I would have done it differently.

"Line up on Monday morning, and I'll heal you then," perhaps I could have said. But no, as when Monday morning came, those wicked ones would have thought of the next excuse, "There is a turmoil and civil disruption that Jesus is causing. The Romans must arrest Him."

So I had to do it on the go. For I had to be on the go and My location unpredictable in order to finish My job.

So about Lebanon? Everyone wants a piece of this pie. But the rulers are already designated. There won't be a moment to let good move in, "don't worry". It's already been planned, "When this nation falls, then this happens." And so on.

So the best thing you can do is to pray for the hearts and minds of believers to remain strong, to know the Word of God and to pass it on. Pray daily for this. I know the physical needs of the hungry. It's My job to feed and water and all, but hearts have to do this of their own will. And your prayers can make situations be such that they will wish to turn to Me of their own free will, and will have the extra empowerment from Above to do so, even at the cost of their lives and family and all that they have held dear. It's going to come at a personal cost to be a believer, more and more as time goes on.

When the digital provider mechanism is in place, people will need to be of a "no religious faith" or at least say they tolerate all other religions, and won't try to stop others, or even try to promote their own. Each one is to let others be, or they are a criminal so to speak. It's baked into the money plan of digital supply, that is automatically deducted or added too, according to need and deed.

"You play by the rules and you stay in the game. If you misstep, then the deductions get so low and get 'in the red' and you've got to work it off in one of the workhouses", so to speak. --Free labour for the regime. Anyone who is hungry is doing so because "they choose to be so and are disobedient to the system", or are too "ignorant" to manage life. If they are "too poor to live, and too ignorant to work", then there are "care facilities" (jails of sort) for them. If they can be reformed in them, then they are released, but only if they have done and accepted all the needed enforced things and technology. If not, then they are moved on to the grave. "They refused treatment, and went insane. Sadly they took their life..." and whatnot.

All the ills and troubles of society have been carefully thought through and planned out. Of course without Me and My spirit, nothing will actually work, because peace of heart and a sound mind can't be given by anything but by God. But they will try their best to cover all bases.

How irritating it will be when there are those who are both outside of their system and who don't need the benefits! "What? They haven't bought or needed food in a month? How do these rebels do it? And they never need medical treatment, in fact, neither does anyone who lives in the area; so we can't update the information (chips) on those who come into get treated. We planned to take them away for investigation under some sort of charge, but they were gone, without a trace. We just can't get our hands on these ones!"

(Thought: That those working so hard to get the world ready for control and "utopia" and all, don't want to be all too old and gone. Of course, they want it to happen in their lifetime, if they can help it. Going the past 20 years was long enough, and I don't know if they want to wait a whole other 20 or so. They'll be sickly and such. But time will tell.)
