

8-NOV-2020_discard the hurtful that entangles

(Jesus speaking:) Be not one with this world, for to do so is to place a snare on yourself. Snares come in all sorts of packages, sizes and shapes. There is something to fit about every situation and person. What does a snare do? It binds and hinders your fruitfulness and mission. So if something holds you back, when I say to go, then this is a snare that needs to go.

Don't get entangled with the thoughts of another human being. Drop them like flies. Don't dwell on the words of a man, for to do so is to be entangled. What could you have been enjoying if you hadn't been so wrapped up thinking about the words that hurt?

I could have been lifting you up with brand new ideas.

Think about your mates, the ones that love you and wish they could hold you and be with you. For there are so many. For every hurtful word while on your mission field, there are 10,000 yea more that would love to speak a word of faith and encouragement. Listen for them. Let the words hug you while you are alone in your calling.

But you are not alone, just different. Just in different "layers" of the program. I can see all. But just because you can't, doesn't mean it's not real.

Did someone say something that hurt? Don't think about it. Rather remember 10 other good words of love that have been or could be said unto you, to cheer you on. I think not like a man. I do new things, and I love the unlovely. I work with the sick and blind. I give to those who can't repay. I cherish the tossed aside and discarded. I need those who think they need Me not. I love those who scarcely know what the word "love" means and can't show it back to Me in all the ways I need to feel it.

I am so out of the box you don't truly know Me yet. But you are trying, and that is all that I ask for in a mate—to reach for Me, and to let Me touch you. To draw near to Me, and to let Me be near to you. In time we'll get to know one another better.
